We're a Cashman Good Government Finalist—again!

Boulder City is the biggest city in Nevada in terms of land mass (about 212 square miles). It is a city of approximately 15,000 residents, where an ordinance caps annual residential growth and gambling is prohibited. Yet the property tax rate in Boulder City is the lowest of cities in the State of Nevada. How have we retained excellent City services without raising taxes? That's the subject of our third Cashman Good Government Award in the past six years! The City of Boulder City was selected a finalist of the award, winning the category "Cities under 100,000." The award recognizes government ingenuity in providing services in a timely manner and at a lower cost. Judges recognized the City's efforts to lease City land for solar and battery storage development. Boulder City will join five other finalists in Carson City tomorrow (2/25) at the Nevada Taxpayers Association Dinner. One of the six finalists will be named the overall award winner. Congratulations to the Finance Department!!!
