Anonymous Donor Provides $1.3 Million for Community Pool

BOULDER CITY – This week, Boulder City received two checks totaling $1,346,743.60 from an anonymous donor, specifically for the “Community Pool” located in Broadbent Park. The donation was unsolicited and the donor wanted to remain anonymous.

“We learned of the possibility of this donation just two weeks ago, but felt it should not be shared with the general public until we had the checks in our possession,” said City Manager Al Noyola. “Boulder City is fortunate to have the support of generous donors who care about the community.”

City staff will recommend that Council accept the donation during the June 10 City Council meeting. (The meeting will be held on Monday, June 10, since June 11 is Election Day.) “I’m constantly out beating the bushes for alternative funding sources, and staff has been directed by Council to seek those out as well,” said Mayor Rod Woodbury, referring to Resolution 6907. “So, we couldn’t be more thrilled to receive this gracious gift from a true friend of Boulder City. I would like to personally thank the donor and family members for supporting this wonderful community asset of ours.” The funds will be set aside in an account specifically for the Aquatic Facility.

The donation happens as voters are considering two ballot measures for a new Aquatic Facility. The current pool is nearly forty years old and in need of costly repairs on a regular basis.

If the ballot questions pass, the new facility is currently planned to be built next to the existing pool so that it won’t need to be shut down during the estimated 24-30 month construction period. Construction costs alone are currently estimated to be $27 million, but the voters are being asked to consider authorization of up to $40 million to cover necessary design costs, inflation, and potential contingencies.

“Staff has worked hard to educate residents about the proposed Aquatic Facility,” according to Roger Hall, Parks and Recreation Director. “We’ve met with the public and been transparent throughout this entire process.”

Details on the ballot questions can be found at www.bcnv.org/pool.
